

Spaces that Unsettle. Visuality of Haunted Landscapes in the Ethnographic Research in Post-Displacement Regions of Poland, Czechia and Slovakia

After 1945, German-speaking populations were expelled from Slavic Central Europe. In their place, the new settlers came, and they lived with and among the objects left behind by the Germans. In this project, we are interested how the persistence of these things left behind influenced the new cultures of the post-displacement regions in Poland, Czechia and Slovakia post-1945.
